The Australian Taxation Office (ATO) needs to be able to offer impartial advice to taxpayers, not just use it for its own purposes, but that takes careful and detailed thought. In tax law, the ATO (and similar organisations in other jurisdictions) has a responsibility to advance public policy on issues related to the administration and administration of the laws. Sometimes that will involve providing advice and opinion. By way of example, the ATO has a responsibility to contribute to policy debate within the relevant sector, even if it doesn't formally conduct the research on tax policy questions. In particular, the Taxation Advisory Council (TAC), the body within the ATO that sits between the ATO Board and ATO staff, has a responsibility to contribute to the public policy debate in taxation. It lies approximately east of Golczewo, north-east of Mostki, and north of the regional capital Kielce. The village has a population of 400. The village has an old water mill, which is still operating. References Category: Villages in Mostki County This invention relates to a new and improved seat back, for use in vehicles, such as automobiles, vans, trucks and the like, comprising a back frame section which is pivotally connected to the seat frame and supports a spring type fabric skin having a zipper tape strip secured thereto. The fabric skin has a soft cover thereon to protect the fabric, but which can be opened to expose the fabric within the cover. It is conventional to provide seats for the drivers of motor vehicles, such as automobiles, vans, trucks and the like, with a back rest which is pivotally supported relative to the seat frame. The back rests can be generally, as shown, pivoted downwardly from a generally horizontal or slightly inclined position during use and stored in a normally upright position when not in use. However, during these pivoting movements, there is often an undesirable rubbing or friction of the back rest against the spine of the driver or user. Many seat backs have a back rest which is supported in the generally horizontal or slightly inclined position by spring means. These springs, however, exert a great force on the driver and, therefore, can tend to fatigue the user, while they are also dangerous in that they require a firm and stable hand hold by the user for locking of the back rest in the seat cushion. These spring means are particularly dangerous to the elderly or the handicapped, who normally hold the back rest with one hand and must use the other hand to manipulate the seat cushion. C
